NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC MAGAZINE
FEBRUARY 2016

Look for the February issue on digital newsstands (online at ngm.com, on smartphones and tablet computers) now and on print newsstands Jan. 26.

Authors and photographers are available for interviews. Photos and video are available.

National Geographic magazine’s yearlong exploration of the power of parks, celebrating the centennial of the National Park Service on Aug. 25, 2016, continues this month with a special look at Denali National Park and Preserve. Every issue this year is dedicated to helping people better understand the wonders and challenges of parks across the world. Visit natgeo.com/parks for more.

Denali
The national park covers six million acres of Alaska. How can that not be enough?
(by Tom Clynes, photographs by Aaron Huey)

London Down Under
Beneath one of Europe’s oldest capitals lies a “rich archaeological layer cake” of historic artifacts.
(by Roff Smith, photographs by Simon Norfolk)

Seeing the Light
From the unsophisticated to the ultrasharp, eyes have evolved to see to species’ needs.
(by Ed Yong, photographs by David Liittschwager)

The Changing Face of Saudi Women
With degrees, jobs, and digital media, they’re living in a wider world.
(by Cynthia Gorney, photographs by Lynsey Addario)

National Geographic magazine is the official journal of the National Geographic Society, a global nonprofit membership organization driven by a passionate belief in the power of science, exploration and storytelling to change the world. Published in English and 40 local-language editions, the magazine has a global circulation of around 6.4 million. It is sent each month to National Geographic members and is available at ngm.com and on print and digital newsstands (smartphones and tablet computers).

###